

Trainer Profile

Patrick McDonald

Nationality: United States

Languages: English

Patrick moved to China in 1998 and joined the ClarkMorgan team in 2004. This makes him one of ClarkMorgan's most experienced and qualified China-centric trainers.

His trainings are illustrated with stories and anecdotes from his past experience that bring the interaction alive for his trainees, while also tailoring the training to the specific needs of the trainees and company.

Patrick holds an MBA specialising in International Business and a Project Management Professional (PMP) certification from the Project Management Institute. He studied cultural anthropology and East Asian Studies from Loyola University – Chicago.

Project Management Skills Expert

Patrick is the Operations Director for ClarkMorgan and has leveraged his Project Management skills to initiate, plan, execute, control, and close a multitude of projects. These projects range from small internal departmental policy changes to implementing companywide IT/IS deployments. He has held project management roles in the service, retail, transportation, energy, IT, education, consulting, and training fields over the past 20 years.

Patrick's most recent client focused project has been to help design, create, and implement the intake and training plan for a completely new concept by DIY giant, B&Q. This project is the first of its kind in the world and involves managing hundreds of details, new staff and the successful rollout of a totally radical home interior design solution to the Chinese market. Patrick has overseen the development of internal IP control projects, website development projects, and information sharing and processing projects.
