

Trainer Profile

Yan Sai

Client Testimonials:

“Yan is the trainer you want, when considering complex customised training scheme for a diversified group of people. During our business relationship, she never failed me and always made me proud of choosing her as our trainer.”

– Harry Wang,
Director of Human Resources at d.light design

“The training course is carefully designed and tailor-made to suit our particular needs. The combination of bilingual presentations and creative exercises is well blended to maximise knowledge sharing and team interaction.”

– Liu Chuyang,
Deputy Ambassador, Australian Embassy

Nationality: United States

Languages: English and Mandarin

Yan was born in Beijing, China, and worked for 18 years in the Chinese military. She attended the Chinese People's Liberation Army Air Force Engineering University where she completed her undergraduate, and later completed a Masters of Arts in Education and Leadership and Administration at Shanghai Jiaotong University.

In 1999, Yan emigrated to the United States of America, where she worked as a Project Director at the University of California (UCLA) and later for Japanese airlines, ANA, as a Sales Director. Yan returned to China in 2012, moving to Shanghai where she joined the ClarkMorgan team.

Presentation Skills Expert

Yan is an experienced presenter in both English and Mandarin. She has presented in the USA to over 27,000 people, as well as audiences in the hundreds across Greater China. She regularly speaks at conferences, and more recently spoke at the Shanghai Business Review (SBR), and the NetworkHR Forum.

Yan is also qualified in Stakeholder-centered coaching methodology, which she applies to both her one-on-one presentation coaching, as well as group workshops.
